Description

The heart of this home unfolds in a sequence of relaxed, sun-washed spaces that feel unmistakably coastal yet grounded in the warm craft traditions of Mexico. The living room is cozy and unpretentious, anchored by a neutral sofa layered with textured pillows and a soft throw, flanked by two modern blue armchairs that add a pop of color without shouting for attention. Natural materials—woven rattan, a sunburst mirror, simple wood accents—introduce an easy, beach-house rhythm, while the large sliding glass doors open to the courtyard and invite that distinct Baja light to pour in. It's a room built for lingering mornings, informal conversations, and the kind of stillness that sneaks up on you
